Judith,

On the first item, we'll look into it. My staff or the county may already know something about it.
On the second item, various options and ideas have been under consideration, including the possibility of digging new wells.

Hi Nathan. There is a company advertising home water treatment for $1,800 per home. The cost will be out of reach for many, but some residents may consider it. Is doh able to review the product to determine if it actually removes Pfoa ? Second , is there any consideration of the village digging new wells rather than relying on treatment ? Of course the plume would need to first be delineated Thanks, Judith
